We continue to be in a holding pattern waiting for it to get worse. Predictions are still in place, indicating the next week or two will be the worst for call volume and COVID impacts in Missouri. We are continuing to watch call volume and patient acuity closely. While there is a slight upward trend in patient acuity, there is no change in average call volume in the past few weeks. So, remain vigilant for a while more as we expect our rural trends to fall behind the urban areas.

Bob and I are continuing to work on 3D printing the adapters for our respirators. Above is our first attempt. The second attempt with some improvements is being printed today. It's a pain and prints slowly, but it's better than 12-week ETA.

Finally, I've been finishing the RSI protocol online today... and I must say it is awesome. Probably the most in-depth and complicated protocol we have. There have been a bunch of other protocols finished in the past few days. So, go check them out and give me some feedback. <http://ozarksems.com/protocols.php>
